ON-CAMPUS LIVING = COLLEGE SUCCESS

Studies of students who live on campus (compared to those living off campus) have found that they are more likely to be satisfied with their college experience, be more involved in academic and extracurricular activities, complete their undergraduate degree, and pursue graduate studies. That's why, at Cal State East Bay, we strive to provide our students with the highest quality — and most enriching — on-campus residential living experience possible.

You’re likely to be both excited and anxious about living with a roommate for the first time. Whether you choose to live with someone you know or a whole new set of roommates, communication is key to a great roommate relationship. The best way to get to know each other is to talk about your likes and dislikes. Prior to move in, you’ll complete a roommate agreement online in the Housing Portal that establishes expectations and builds a strong foundation for a great roommate experience.
